Jurassic Conservatory | $7 per person during general admission - $9 during show

Did you know Indiana used to be an equatorial swamp? Have you ever wondered why no one finds dinosaur fossils here? And what's that tropical-but-native fruit tree that owes its range to vanished herds of mastodons? Join us for a conservatory tour through time as we glimpse Indiana's deep past and trace the history of life on land through the "living fossil" plants in our collection. Available year-round.

Houseplants Gone Wild | $10 per person during general admission - $12 during show

From pothos to monstera, our beloved houseplants come to us from all corners of the globe. Join us for a conservatory tour showcasing massive specimens of favorite houseplants, and then share a pot of tea as we explore the Victorian origins of the houseplant craze and catch a glimpse of household greenery in their native habitats. We'll finish by planting cuttings for you to take home! Available year-round.
